

Topless Ban Wins Approval

Topless bathing suits may not be worn in restaurants and bars in Lomita following action by the Lomita City Council last week.

Councilmen unanimously approved an ordinance and amendments to the city's health code which prohibit topless waitresses in the city. The ordinance was adopted as emergency measures and became effective at once.

During last week's meeting, councilmen failed to take action on a measure which would have given voters an opportunity to decide if Lomita councilmen should be salaried. The council previously had considered an ordinance which, if approved by voters, would have provided for a salary of $75 per month. In other action, councilmen:

- Approved a recommendation of the city's Traffic Commission to install stop signs on the Woodward Avenue approaches to 253rd Place.
- Denied a request for an one-hour parking along the east side of Woodward Avenue in the vicinity of Lomita Boulevard.

HE SAID he had visited three continuation high schools and noted that all have their own faculty and campus. Separate facilities, full-time teachers and counselors, and a regular school day are prerequisites for a successful continuation program, he said. Shoen said the facility did not have to be "an elaborate plant," but that it is important it be a permanent plant in a "nice location."

Trustees approved the resolution after they were told the action is not final. The board may change its mind at a later date without losing anything, Dr. Hull said.

Ray Watt, J. R. Higgins Jr., and Edward P. Greene were among those who responded with offers of help.

Midway Construction Co., an affiliate of R. A. Watt, Inc., sent a crew to the YWCA site at 2320 W. Carson St. to form and pour concrete foundations. The concrete was supplied by Greene's Ready-Mixed firm at greatly reduced prices.

The Watts firm again sent a crew to the site when Higgins, owner of Higgins Brick and Tile, donated the 12,500 bricks which were used in the walls. A total of 31 man-days were required to complete the laying of the bricks and forming of the concrete.

All equipment, reinforcing steel, scaffolding, and mixers were supplied by the Watt firm.

Firm Readies New Torrance Plant

Construction is due to begin shortly on a new plant for Industrial Molding Corp., firm officials announced today. The new facility will be located on 190th Street near Western Avenue.

The firm is engaged in the production of injection molds, according to Robert T. Bloom, president. The firm does custom work for other companies.

Howard Van Heuklyn, who handled planning and design of the new facility, said the two-story brick structure will house executive offices, sales and engineering departments, as well as production facilities.

The two-story structure, which contains 32,000 square feet of space, was designed by Risley, Gould, and Van Heuklyn, AIA.
